THE SITUATION AT THE FRONT.

There is no marked change to report this week. "Wandering Eye", the name of several of the victims of the Frog Lake massacre, is reported to be a prisoner in the hands of the Wood Cross, who intend to drive him over to the authorities. Big Bear has been for several nights prowling in the wilds of a region where it is not to be expected for straggled troops to follow him. The camp accordingly cannot be said to have been pushed. On the whole, the Indians are in a state of anxiety as we could well imagine. Rumors of straggled Indians and individual actions are current, the telephone wire network at Buffalo has been cut, possibly by hostile Indians, and various half-breeds who associated along with Poundmaker have disappeared in one hour or thereabouts. How strange is being a crowd on today, almost within view of the police and military at Buffalo, and it is said that Poundmaker's Honor is again the readiness of all the young lads who are still "waiting for a fight." Reports again say that the half-breeds in the neighborhood of Duck Lake are openly starting to their houses and goods which had been hidden in the thick before the troops came upon the ground. Many half-breeds are getting at St. Appollis daily from Prince Albert and Bismarck endeavoring to get employment for their means. Prospects are very bad, as there is very little fighting to be done from these places, and all discussion led to the harsh terms for his comrades in one rendering to King, Middleton. Facts are mentioned at Prince Albert that indicate some steps are taken to relieve the straggling half-breeds and Indians in the troubled districts, they will form in bands of brigades and platoon detachments. It is said they are now intended now thus before the rebellion, and are thought to give trouble before the withdrawal of the troops.

All this is not very pleasant reading for those who are looking for an early return of the Canadian troops to their homes. We are not surprised that since the fighting was over the men themselves are reported to be impatient at the delay in the arrangements for bringing them back to civilization, and that General Middleton is considered "obnoxious" because he does not decide the manner of which forces before the work has been in hand is fully completed.

A grave responsibility would certainly not upon him if he were to send home all his men before the country was pacified, as it would be very satisfactory if a fresh outbreak were to occur that would necessitate a second expedition being put into the field. While it is well to be one's good against against the straggled reports put in circulation by those whose main object is to bewilder by the expenditure of public money in their locality, the maintenance of large bodies of troops must necessarily result, we are inclined to agree in the main with the following observations of the Montreal Witness, which has been one of the best informed papers throughout the recent troubles. It says—

"It appears probable that before this summer is over there will be serious trouble at Buffalo, unless a strong body of troops is left in garrison there to keep the straggled and Indian apart. Almost from the hour that the Indians laid down their arms the straggled became belligerent. They expressed their intention of shooting every Indian at sight, and in several instances they appear to have carried out their threat, although no deaths have as yet been recorded on that side. It is not to be wondered at that nothing of this kind is known. They declared that if the Indians were allowed to return to their territories they would drive the settlers out of the country and, during the month that has followed Poundmaker's surrender, would appear to corroborate that view. These rumors, all doubtless exaggerated, either show that the Indians are accessible, or that the settlers are determined to have them driven from their reservations at any cost. The loss of General Middleton's colors in the three reported detachments and the manner in which the Indians behaved, had led to the belief that it is the straggled, and not the Indians, who are disturbing the peace this time."

Toronto, June 30, 1895.

A RELIGIOUS QUESTION.

There is now trouble in the North-West on this subject. In one quarter we learn that prisoners were not allowed to have mass celebrated for their benefit, and the following interesting story comes from the Edmonton Bulletin—

"On Sunday morning last, about six o'clock, Otago, The Transmontains ordered No. 2 Company of the 6th Btalion to fall in for church services, it being the intention to have the service to be St. Albert to take part in the service of Proclamation Sunday on Corpus Christi Day. One of the private named Ouchterlony, a Protestant, refused to fall in, saying that he had promised the minister to attend the Protestant church on that day. The captain demanded what right he had to promise to attend any church without consulting him, and, after some words,

REDUCTION OF PRICE.

Our publishers have satisfaction in announcing that, in compliance with the desire expressed by many of their patrons, they have decided to make the price of the CANADIAN PICTORIAL AND ILLUSTRATED WAR NEWS lower than 15 cents, instead of 15 cents, per copy. In order, however, to bring down the cost of production to a measure to some extent corresponding with an unobscured reflection, the publishers, which has during the progress of the campaign in the North-West been a constant feature, will for the present be discontinued—that is, except when circumstances arise that necessitate the providing of additional space for illustrations of events of extraordinary public interest.

Every effort will still be made to maintain a high standard of literary and artistic excellence, and it will be obvious to all who have thus far approved and supported the undertaking that, if such an investment also results as we are led to expect the reduction in price will bring about, it will be possible to add many features of interest to the publication. Our patrons may of my rate not assured that the effort to supply them with an illustrated Canadian family paper, patriotic in tone and free from political rancor, will be continued with unabated enterprise and energy.

In order to avoid misconception the publishers desire it to be understood that, while No. 15 and all numbers following will be sold at 10 cents, the price of No. 1 to 14, for which there is a large and increasing demand, will still be retained at 15 cents per copy.

THE SITUATION AT THE FRONT

practically has come to an end, as all the troops, except the regular forces retained by the Canadian Government for three years service, are sent on their way back to their local headquarters.

The capture of Big Bear by the Mounted Police—the success previously credited Regt. Smart and Superintendent Gagnon with the arrest—has formed a fitting termination to the campaign. Wandering fighters, who was a regular in the operation perpetrated at Big Bear, is still at large, and reported to be making for the United States boundary. Should he and his fellow wanderers seek an asylum under the Stars and Stripes, there is no reason to apprehend the American Government would refuse their extradition, as political motives could not be alleged in connection of the cold-blooded murder of innocent women, and of the private who homicide and their fate in the performance of their sacred functions.

The main object of interest now lies in the probable date of the arrival of the Ontario troops at East Beulah, after which the rate of their progress can be easily estimated. The situation is at present a somewhat difficult of solution. The North-West frontier is full of trouble and danger, just now exaggerated by a serious fall in the market. Thus the transfer of the baggage on Grand Rapids by means of the Hudson Bay Company's traverse will be a somewhat delicate business. The entrance of the first line is sometimes delayed in daylight after a weary night has prevailed for several days; but it is never attempted after dark. This may be another source of delay. Friends of the remaining battalions must accordingly possess their minds in patience until their arrival is intimated from Beulah, for no communication by wire or any other method can be had with them after they leave Prince Albert until they come in view of that station of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Toronto, July 8, 1916, 4 p.m.

OUR SOUVENIR NUMBER.

Anticipating the demand that would arise on the suppression of the rebellion for a comprehensive history of the rising and of the campaign of the triumphant militia forces, the publishers of the CANADIAN PICTORIAL AND ILLUSTRATED WAR NEWS have been the first to present to the public a comprehensive narrative of the events which have so abated the interest of the country for the past few months.

Recognizing the fact that a narrative pure and simple would hardly satisfy the public taste, they have undertaken the production of a Souvenir Number of this journal, handsomely illustrated with handsome and appropriate views, the same being issued in two parts. The first of these, the circulation of which commenced only last week, is issued a highly creditable publication of twenty-four pages of good paper, twelve pages being occupied with illustrations covering events that centered between the commencement of the rebellion and the battle of Fish Creek. In addition, there are two two-page supplements, one of which is a listed group of the most prominent officers of the North-West Field Force, while the other is a spirited representation of the battle of Fish Creek, based on accurate topographical and other information. Of the latter portion we need only say that it has been written by Mr. T. W. in the "Soldier," whose facile pen has enabled him to set down a comprehensive record of exciting events, such as an unbiased mind could also put in such shape and order. The two parts of this Souvenir Number will indeed contain a complete history of the rebellion and of its suppression. It is only equal to about 140 pages of an ordinary book. Such a history of a fully worth the moderate price of the publication, and some people will feel that in buying it they are actually obtaining the illustrations and the supplements, which every eye will deem worthy of having as a bonus direct from the publishers.

The committee formed the other day at Quebec in the interests of the Red and the Blue have decided to issue a Souvenir Number for the production of the total of all the soldiers that the Red's annual war season, and thus make the other a second volume issued.

DEATH OF COL. WILLIAMS, M.P.

Those who looked upon the handsome portrait of Col. Williams in the last number of the Canadian Pictorial, and read the brief account of the manner of his gallant officer, will have felt impressively shocked at the sad and unexpected news of his death by brain fever while on his way home with the men of the Millford Battalion, whose health he so greatly assisted to win for them in the remarkable charge at Batoche. However,

"The best, the dearest love of the day,
Must taste that cup, for man is born to die."

It is sad indeed for his friends in the Home of Canada—and they fit in both sides of the House—to note the great compassion of a brother member who never allowed the reasons of party favour to break the ordinary ties of friendship and courtesy. It will be painful for the children he has reared, the constituents he has served, and the brave soldiers he has so worthily commanded, to lose him. But saddest of all will just now be the feelings of one of Canada's most kindly daughters, whose promise to brighten his widowed hours was to have been fulfilled soon after his expected arrival from the front, at the head of the Millford Battalion.

OUR NEXT NUMBER

will contain several views of special interest, and by our special correspondent with General Middleton, and a full page picture showing why the 43rd Battalion have been called the Alligators. The views of the Old Fort, etc., which were crowded out of the present issue, may be found in our next. We also hope to present several views of the military funeral at St. Thomas, of Private Hutchinson.

REORGANIZATION OF THE N. W. MOUNTED POLICE

The following extract from one of the very brilliant bills now introduced into Parliament contains the whole of the first and only clause—

"Whereas any officer or member of the North West Mounted Police Force is serving with the militia as a military force, by order of the Governor in Council, every such officer and member of the police force shall be subject to the 'Consolidated Militia Act of 1883, and any Act in amendment thereof, in the manner and to the extent as if he were an active militia or subject thereof."

This is not very well so far as it goes; but, while it appears to bring the Mounted Police very properly under the authority of militia law wherever any member of the force are operating with troops, there is nothing therein contained which makes it obligatory upon politicians to yield obedience to and respect the authority of officers of the Mounted Police, fully of the force organized for so very different purposes, and under entirely distinct legislation, as ever to be again brought together, a clause should be introduced in the bill now before the House of Commons conferring relative rank in the militia upon officers who hold commissions in the Mounted Police. If this step were taken, the respective authority of the police or militia officers serving together would be settled by the dates of their commissions as recorded in the Militia List. How their respective rank has been established and recognized during the recent campaign has never yet been explained; but, as Sir John Macdonald, in introducing the bill now under consideration, explained that the necessity for it arose because "only by a stretch of authority" had the police been employed in conjunction with the troops, it is clear that the necessity of providing for an altogether likely contingency was not appreciated until incoherence was actually felt. A correspondent of the Montreal Witness, writing from Batoche, on July 20th, says that on the 29th of April, shows how the assumption of militia or military titles by the officers of the police are calculated to produce confusion, if not to provoke insubordination. He says—

"Captain Hickson, who arrived with the Fort Pitt detachment on Tuesday, is now in command of the Mounted Police here; of course, under the command of our colonel. It is not very clear to me that a 'captain' should rank before a 'colonel.' I may as well say that a great deal of confusion exists with regard to the officers of the police here. Properly speaking, Col. Irvine is 'Governor-in-Chief,' Col. Henderson is a 'Superintendent,' and Col. Morris is an 'Inspector.' The military rank generally applied to them comes from their position in the militia. 'Captain' Dickson is an Inspector in the Police Force, and is senior to 'Colonel' Morris."

The fact is, retired army or militia officers who have accepted commissions in the Mounted Police are not justified in using the designations of their former military rank in their new service, except military ranks beyond what the law—as regulations bearing the force of law—can for an rank relative to the position held in the police force.

THE ALLEGED RELIGIOUS OUTRAGES

In our last number we drew attention to what seemed a serious ground of complaint—that Catholic prisoners in gaid at Regina had been denied the privilege of hearing mass. Sir John Macdonald, however, explained in the House of Commons that the refusal to admit the priests was the result of a law issued absolutely in an order he had telegraphed to the authorities at Regina that no one should be allowed to see the prisoners, this instruction having been given so as to ensure their safe-keeping. On the matter being brought to his attention he had telegraphed permission for ministers of religion to have access.

As regards the case of the private in the 4th (Mount Royal) Rifles who, according to the Edmonton Advertiser, had been permitted for refusing to attend a religious parade when he is a professed Protestant, he is presented a Protestant service, presided at by the Minister of Militia, on Monday last, read in the House the following telegram received in reply to his inquiry—

"On Monday, the private referred to, enlisted as a Catholic. He, for the first time, just to receive instruction, pretended, on an occasion in question, to be a Protestant. However, he was prevented from being refused to attend Catholic service, but for having failed his comrades to notify and having used insulting language to his captain.—J. O'CONNOR."

We explained last week the law which governs such cases. If it is O'Connell, who has raised a storm of unendured indignation against his superior officers in a syncretic Protestant tenet, has really been guilty of the conduct above stated, it was a great mistake on the part of his commanding officer to allow access to a branch of discipline to pass over with so light a punishment.

"Miserable Man and a large number of other bad Indians who figured in the Frog Lake massacre, have manifested to G. C. Galt, who has returned from the north, detachments of the police are leaving the remainder of the band. Their capture is only a matter of time.

When Frog Lake (Ontario) is the large village which was situated on the Frog Lake side near Fort Lacombe. The crew is really now very small away, and it is very likely that it will be soon occupied by the 5th Battalion. The Millford have been ordered a special crew, mainly composed, and set up in the community of Frog Lake, to the company of Gilbert and Williams, various of the Indian nature.

A reference received from Fort Pitt announces the arrival there of troops under Gen. Strange last Saturday morning by the steamer "The Arctic" from the St. Lawrence. Fort Pitt was received by Gen. Middleton—so that afterwards, after which various steamers are proposed for construction. It is said it will take three days to reach the mouth of the South Saskatchewan at Grand Rapids, near Lake Winnipeg. The steamer is to be shipped as an expedited boat on July 8. It will take every available transport vessel now in the service before the troops in order to get the benefit of the present high water.
